This course was designed for Officers/Detectives assigned to Narcotics, Gangs, Vice/Human Trafficking, or Specialized Units. This intense three (3) day course will provide the students with the skillset to effectively employ stationary, foot, and mobile surveillance techniques. Surveillance is an “Art” that requires training, discipline, and patience. Most investigations involve conducting surveillance of individual(s) without being detected, which is why understanding and utilizing proven techniques is so important.

Day One will consist of classroom lecture focused on the tradecraft of surveillance techniques, counter-surveillance techniques, mobile surveillance, goals/objectives of surveillance operations, field operations pre-planning, decision making and case documentation. The lecture will also include the legal use of GPS tracking devices. Search Warrant examples for GPS tracking devices will be provided.

Day Two will consist of field exercises where the students will conduct surveillance on role players. Decision making out in the field and case coordination will also be covered.

Day Three will consist of a practice application covert operation where the students will apply the skills sets and techniques learned during the course. Students will need to provide an unmarked department or personal vehicle for the practical application portion (day two and three). However, communications devices are provided.
